	Description: The addition will be to the rear of our current home and connected by a new foundation. It will have living areas and master bedroom plus one master bathroom downstairs, two bedrooms upstairs with an adjoining bathroom for these two rooms and two stories. I really want to know if the down slop for the septic drain will have enough downfall to the city sewer entry. I have been told by other home owners here that the drain under the street is not very low and this may cause an issue with my drains being in the rear even further than the current home.
